What is Public Health Accreditation?

Accreditation is a status granted to a local health department that has been found to meet or exceed stated rules, benchmarks and activities.

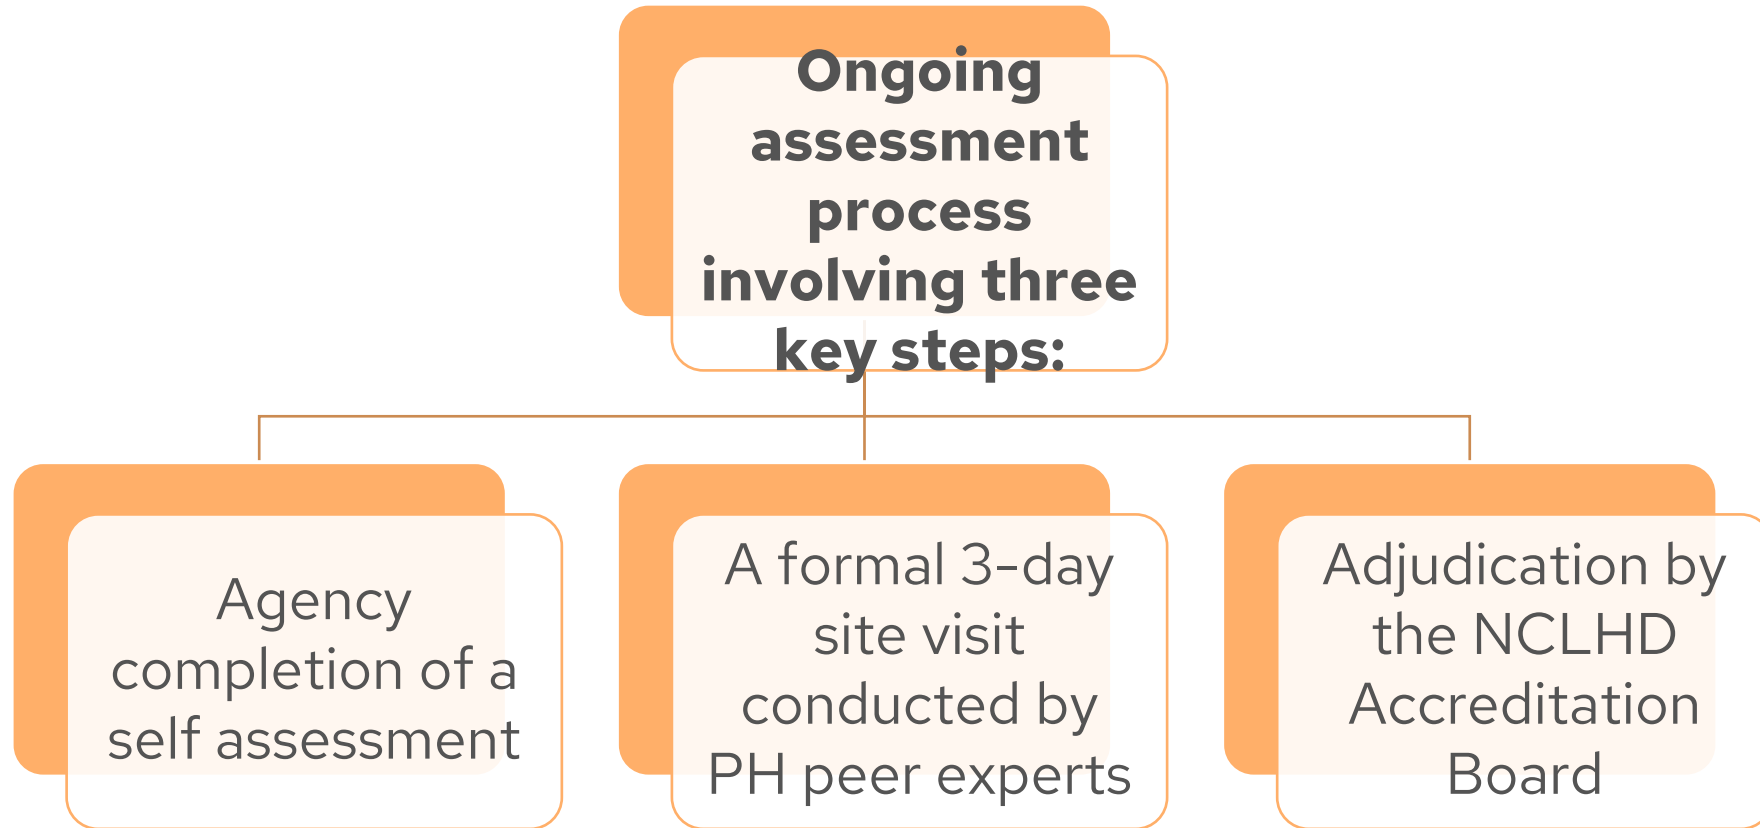

In North Carolina, local health department accreditation is mandatory as stated in North Carolina Administrative Code, 10A NCAC 48A.

Accreditation is conferred by the North Carolina Local Health Department Accreditation (NCLHDA) Board housed through the North Carolina Institute for Public Health, issuing successful LHDs four-year designations.

Four-year accreditation cycle for LHDs

Agency outcome

- ✓ The NCLHDA Site Visit Team recommended Wake County Public Health for reaccreditation with Honors, after achieving a perfect 147/147 assessment scoring.
- ✓ On Friday, November 21, 2025, the NCLHDA Adjudication Board upheld that recommendation by unanimous vote.
- ✓ Officially issued certificate, plaques, and honors' ribbons at the same board adjudication meeting.
- ✓ First time WCPH has received honors distinction or 100% accuracy rate on agency accreditation audit.
